

Trainings provided by T-Group

1. Chemical management
2. Environment Risk Management
3. Health and safety standards
4. Fire safety
5. Communications
6. Internal Auditor training

Why are Trainings Important?

Training presents a prime opportunity to expand the knowledge base of all employees, but many employers find the development opportunities expensive. Employees also miss out on work time while attending training sessions, which may delay the completion of projects. Despite the potential drawbacks, training and development provides both the company as a whole and the individual employees with benefits that make the cost and time a worthwhile investment.

The Glossy version of slavery and bondage..

Today, the textile industry plays a significant role in the country's economy and contributes to 14 per cent of industrial production. But do we really know who the hands behind the garments manufactured in India are? A group of craftsmen which also include small children ranging from 5-14years, unmarried women who work as bonded / forced laborers, migrants from different rural states who are ready to work long hours and within minimum wages. While India is often quoted as the power house with progressive legal systems who is actively investing in Nuclear energy and Infrastructure , It is a lived reality that people are still going hungry.

Hunger, poverty, starvation, discrimination, atrocities, caste based employment, sexual exploitation and trafficking of women and children and that list of misery has only grown leap and bounds.

When you run a country based on a market-centered approach, where profits are always put over people and their welfare, this disparity is bound to occur. Recently Kailash Satyarthi won the Nobel peace prize for his work on child rights and trafficking. \(READ MORE\)
